Reymond (NSTCF, 736) “the ‘in Christ’ relationship between Christ and the elect individual does not first come into existence when the sinner places his faith in Christ. Rather, it is an all-embracing relationship in its soteric references, which God takes up into and includes within all that he has done, is doing, and will do in behalf of the sinner.” Yet “the Scriptures will not permit us to believe that, because God elected certain people in Christ from all eternity, that they therefore always enjoyed the fullness of his favor in history and that for them there is no transition from wrath to grace in history.”
