1. Satan continues to _____ Job before God even though he has failed to shake Job's faith.

a. In spite of the severe trials that Job has endured, he has not only maintained a right relationship with God but has actually grown more _____ in his faith.

b. There is _____ in Job that deserves the suffering he has endured, but God allows Satan to continue to test Job by afflicting him physically. But even though Satan is the one who brings Job's afflictions, God is the One who _____ them.

c. Job must now endure excruciating physical _____.

"Job went into his trial destitute of many of those firm supports and grounds of consolation which are now so plentifully supplied to suffering _____."
- John Calvin

2. Job _____ in his faith through his physical pain and the foolish counsel of his wife.

a. Job's wife, in the midst of great suffering herself, became a mouthpiece for _____.

"It is Satan's policy to send his temptations by the hand of those that are _____ to us, as he tempted Adam by Eve and Christ by Peter." - Matthew Henry

b. Job endured his trials through a foundational _____ in his sovereign God.

"(In Job's response to his wife we have) ... a picture of the horrible weakness of a faith that goes by sight and the amazing strength of a faith that _____ the sovereign hand of God in all things." - John Reisinger

"Job considers that, though good and evil are contraries, yet they do not come from contrary causes, but both from the hand of _____, and therefore that in both we must have our eye up unto Him, with thankfulness for the good He sends and without fretfulness at the evil." - Matthew Henry
