

Dangerous Statements by Infant Baptisers

Let me illustrate my claim that some of the statements of infant baptisers are highly dangerous.¹ More, they are frankly unbiblical. As I have already noted, some of their statements give the impression (to put it no stronger) that they believe in baptismal regeneration; their Confessions teach it! This can have a devastating – even disastrous – effect on those who take the statements at face value. I realise and acknowledge that Reformed infant-baptisers say other things to contradict these statements – their usual ‘qualifiers’ – but that does not alter the fact that they did – and still do – make these dangerous assertions in the first place.

Martin Luther, for example, commenting on: ‘For as many of you as were baptised into Christ have put on Christ’ (Gal. 3:27):

Putting on of Christ... consists... in a new birth and a new creation... which is done in baptism... They which are baptised, are regenerated and renewed by the Holy Ghost... There rises in them... new and holy affections, [such] as the fear of God, true faith and assured hope... There begins in them also a new will.

¹ Let me explain my use of ‘dangerous’. When I wrote Battle, I felt that the things I had read in Luther, Calvin, the Puritans and their followers, ought not to be read as they appear; that the caveats the theologians introduced blunted or sanitised their claims, assertions and promises. I judged, however, such statements to be ‘dangerous’ in that those who read or heard the claims, and who did not fully grasp the nuances of the caveats, might actually believe what (it appeared) they were being told. That was how I felt about these things. But I have now come to a firmer, more sinister conclusion. I have allowed the word ‘dangerous’ to stand, but I am now convinced that these statements – for all their qualifiers – were intended to mean what they seem to mean. What is more, many who follow the Reformers and their Confessions take them to mean what they seem to mean; and increasingly so. I will provide plenty of evidence in addition to what I have already produced. In short, I would now say the statements are not merely dangerous; they are (and I use the word advisedly) diabolical.

He attacked the Anabaptists,² saying they were:

Fond and fantastical spirits, which go about to deface the majesty of baptism, and speak wickedly of it. Paul contrariwise commends and sets it forth with honourable titles, calling it 'the washing of the new birth, the renewing of the Holy Ghost' (Tit. 3:5). And here also he says, that all they which are baptised, have put on Christ. As if he said: You have not received through baptism a mere token whereby you are enrolled in the number of the Christians, as in our time many fantastical heads have supposed, which have made of baptism a token only, that is to say, a bare and empty sign. But as many (says he) as have been baptised, have put on Christ: that is, you have been carried out of the law into a new birth, which is wrought in baptism... Paul therefore teaches that baptism is not a sign, but the garment of Christ... Wherefore baptism is a thing of great force and efficacy.³

² Luther marked out the path – which many Reformers followed: When in a tight corner, attack the Anabaptists. It reminds me of the preacher's notes: 'Argument weak here. Shout!' Interestingly, as Pelikan pointed out: 'Despite his many [caustic] references to the Anabaptists throughout the last two decades of his life, Luther knew very little about the group who drew such a radical conclusion from his thought. It seems clear that he probably never saw a genuine Anabaptist face-to-face. Moreover, he persisted in his identification of the Anabaptists with other opponents who had no direct connection with them, even when he had the opportunity to become more precisely informed about the differences... Luther seems to have been content with the rumours he got from others, and the suspicions he had within himself, and on this basis he formed his judgements' (Pelikan p78). As I will show, because of their detestation of the Anabaptists, the Reformers (including Calvin), instead of going for a full biblical reformation on issues such as baptism, showed that they would rather cling to Rome, and try to invent ways out of the corrupting morass this led them into. As the infant baptiser, J.M.Ross, observed, blinded by their prejudice, 'the Reformers felt that they must continue to baptise children, and find non-Roman reasons for doing so. Some[!] of these reasons will not bear examination' (Ross p11).

³ Luther pp340-341. 'If any man... denies (as the fantastical spirits [Anabaptists] do) that righteousness and salvation is given unto an infant when first it is baptised... such a one utterly takes away salvation from baptism' (Luther pp234-235). Well, I for one, 'fantastical spirit' or not, deny it! I certainly take away salvation from baptism (or, rather, refuse to give it to baptism). As for the attack on the Anabaptists by Luther, Calvin and all the rest, at long last the Reformed are admitting the dreadful treatment their ancestors meted out to them. Of course, as I made clear in my Battle, I am not defending the Anabaptists on every issue; indeed, there is no such body as the

Paul, of course, did not say what Luther tried to make him say. Luther confused water baptism with spiritual baptism. Paul was not speaking of water baptism at all in Galatians 3:27. It was spiritual baptism he was writing about. Luther's comments are highly dangerous and wrong; they boil down to the doctrine of baptismal regeneration. He Anabaptists – they formed a disparate and scattered group of persecuted believers with widely differing views on many subjects. Nevertheless, on the issue in hand – baptism – we owe a massive debt to those we call the Anabaptists, and I am glad to be able to quote the following, and I pay tribute to Wright's frankness: 'When the Anabaptist protest emerged... the new [that is, the Reformed] Papalism alongside the old, as the Anabaptists [rightly] read it – joined ranks in suppressing the dissenters. The contemporary church still waits for the appropriate acknowledgement by the Vatican and the worldwide Anglican and Reformed communions (the Lutherans of Germany have in good measure led the way, and the Swiss Reformed churches have followed more recently) of their forbears' scandalous mistreatment of the first significant modern advocates of long-lost dimensions of New Testament baptism. One legacy of the baptismal breach of the 16th century... has been the stubborn hauteur displayed towards Baptists and believer's baptism by infant-baptist churches and theologians... The obscuring [by infant baptisers] of a truer picture [of the history of baptism] derives ultimately from 16th century apologetic, both Catholic and Protestant, against the Anabaptists'. It was their reaction 'against 16th century Anabaptists' and 'later Baptists', which drove infant baptisers to skew their theology and make 'exaggerated historical claims, especially about the New Testament era and the next centuries'. See my earlier note on this warping of history by the advocates of infant baptism. 'The Anabaptists... opposed... infant baptism, including fundamentally the Church-State alliance and the use of the coercive powers of State authorities in defence of the new Protestantism... Rejection of infant baptism not only set the radicals against both the Old Church and the new evangelical Churches, but also put in jeopardy their belonging to the civil community [that is, they were to be – literally – exterminated!], co-terminus as it was with the infant-baptised Church of the city or the region. Religious dissent had inseparable social and political implications, and the Anabaptists suffered repression in many places. They interpreted their persecutions as a baptism of blood in which they were identified with the sufferings of Christ. Their afflictions were a further confirmation, a further seal, of their being members of Christ's body' (Wright: What...? pp4-6,18-20,29). The fact is, 'one of the interesting [grievous, sad] aspects of Reformation polemics is that Medieval heretics – as earlier opponents of the Papacy – have been much more favourably treated by church historians than have the Anabaptists, even though they may have shared ideas in common with the latter' (Friesen p143).

clearly stated that the ‘new birth... is done in baptism’, the ‘new birth... is wrought in baptism’, and he meant water baptism. This is Popery! It is an entirely false assertion.⁴ What the verse actually teaches is that all who are baptised by the Spirit into Christ – that is, all who are spiritually baptised – that is, all who are regenerated – that they, and only they – are true Christians, having put on Christ. Water baptism is not the washing of regeneration. Spiritual baptism is. Water baptism, following faith, symbolises it, yes. But water baptism is not in view in the verse at all. Even though Luther derided them, the Anabaptists in 1525 saw this distinction clearly. Luther did not. He did not understand Galatians 3:27. He did not understand baptism. What he said was wrong; and it was dangerous.

As another example of dangerous statements made by infant baptisers, listen to John Calvin. He, like Luther, also said things which tended (to say the least) towards baptismal regeneration, confusing spiritual and water baptism:

Our children, before they are born, God declares that he adopts for his own when he promises that he will be a God to us, and to our seed after us... As soon as infants are born among them, the Lord signs them with the sacred symbol of baptism; they are therefore, in some sense, the people of God... The offspring of believers are born holy... included in the covenant of eternal life... admitted into the church by baptism... they belonged to the body of Christ before they were born... The children of the godly are born the children of the church and... they are accounted members of Christ from the womb... Children derive some benefit from their baptism... being ingrafted into the body of the church.⁵

This is confused. Infants, by baptism are ‘ingrafted into the body of the church’, even though ‘they belonged to the body of Christ before they were born’. Which is it?⁶ Even so, according to Calvin, infants born to

⁵ Calvin: Institutes Vol.2 pp525,535. See Graham Miller p16; Boorman p77.

⁶ ‘The children of believers are not baptised in order that though formerly aliens from the church they may then, for the first time, become children of God, but rather are received into the church by a formal sign, because, in virtue of the promise, they previously belonged to the body of Christ’. Those who disagreed with him, Calvin dismissed as ‘frenzied spirits’, ‘furious

Christians are in some sense the people of God and holy. They belong to the body of Christ, are accounted members of Christ, and by their baptism are ingrafted into the church. This is a dreadful statement. This is Popery! While it is readily granted that infant baptism may make infants into members of the Roman Catholic Church, the Presbyterian Church, the Church of England, or whatever, it will never – never – make them members of the church of Christ.⁷ When Calvin said that baptised infants are ‘in some sense the people of God’, in what sense, exactly, did he mean? No child is born holy, in the sense Calvin implied. All are born in sin and are the children of wrath (Ps. 51:5; 58:3; Eph. 2:1-3).

As another example of a dangerous statement by infant baptisers, consider the Presbyterian Westminster Confession:

Baptism... is for the solemn admission of the party baptised into the visible church...⁸ Not only those that do actually profess faith in and obedience unto Christ, but also the infants of one, or both, believing parents, are to be baptised... The grace promised is not only offered, but madmen’ (Calvin: Institutes Vol.2 pp526,529,535). Well, I for one, ‘madman’ or not, disagree with him! I find his contradictions quite ‘mad’ enough. Why did Calvin baptise infants? Does anybody know? According to Wright, Calvin baptised infants because he thought ‘they were already regenerate’ (Wright: What...? p100). But, according to Lusk: ‘For Calvin, regeneration began at the font’ (Lusk: ‘Paedobaptism’ p89). For more on Calvin’s and other Reformers’ view of baptism, see Lusk: ‘Paedobaptism’ pp89-102. As Lusk showed, Bucer developed an even stronger sacramentalism than Calvin (who, as I have noted, was influenced by Bucer – Wendel pp324,326); nor were John Knox and Cornelius Burges laggards. See below for more on the confusing (contradictory) reasons given by infant baptisers for their practice.

⁷ Wright ironically pointed out the opposite in Scottish Book of Common Order (1994). The baptised baby is received ‘as a member of the one, holy, catholic and apostolic Church’, but ‘oddly enough’, said Wright, ‘the service is not so explicit about the child’s becoming a member of the Church of Scotland! The lesser does not seem to follow from the greater – or is it encompassed within the greater?’ he asked (Wright: What...? p84).

⁸ I will have much to say on the ‘visible church’ – which is an unscriptural term. Those who use it do so to describe what they think is the biblical norm; namely, a church composed of the regenerate and unregenerate. It is, I say, unscriptural both as a term and concept.

really exhibited, and conferred, by the Holy Ghost, to such (whether of age or infants) as that grace belongs unto.⁹

The Independent or Congregational Savoy Declaration of 1658 repeated this terrifying assertion. Note the word conferred. What a word! Do those who hold to these statements today really believe that grace is actually conferred to elect infants in their baptism? Where do infant baptisers find any scriptural justification for this? Are infant baptisers prepared to assert, categorically, that every one of the elect who is baptised as an infant is regenerated at the time of their baptism? Those who hold to the Westminster Confession say it is so.¹⁰

Again, consider the words of J.W.Alexander, who encouraged infant baptisers to think of their children as Christians, even to say to them: ‘You are Christian children – you are Christ’s – you ought to think and feel and act as such!’¹¹ What an alarming statement. Where do infant baptisers find this parental attitude in the New Testament? Is this the way preachers ought to speak to unregenerate children (and, eventually, unregenerate adults) simply because they were baptised as infants? Where do infant baptisers find the scriptural justification for it? Immense dangers attend the notion.

Listen to the words of Charles Hodge who pleaded with parents to baptise their infants, saying: ‘Do let the little ones have their names written in the Lamb’s book of life, even if they afterwards choose to erase them; being thus enrolled may be the means of their salvation’.¹² Did Hodge really believe this? Can an infant’s name be written in the book of God’s decrees by baptism? Can the growing infant then choose to erase it? Was Hodge an Arminian or a Calvinist at this

¹⁰ What about the elect who are not baptised as infants? And what about the non-elect who are baptised as infants? And notice the ‘whether of age or infants’. Does this mean that baptism confers saving grace on all the elect irrespective of their age when baptised? But if the adult was a believer when baptised, didn’t he have saving grace before his baptism?

¹¹ Kingdon p63.

¹² Kingdon p65. Some modern-day infant baptisers regard Charles Hodge as weak in this area. Commenting on Hodge’s ‘distress over the loss of infant baptism’ in America in the first half of the 19th century, according to Lusk, Hodge himself ‘proved to be part of the problem’. And Lusk had no doubt as to the reason: ‘Hodge failed to develop a robust sacramental theology’ (Lusk: ‘Paedobaptism’ pp71,83).

Dangerous Statements by Infant Baptisers

point? It seems that some infant baptisers, when they speak of baptism, can forget the doctrines of grace. How do Hodge's words square with election? On what do infant baptisers base these opinions?

Another infant baptiser, Archibald Alexander, said:

How solicitous should parents be for their children, that God would bestow his grace upon them, even before they know their right hand from their left; and, when about to dedicate them to God in holy baptism, how earnestly should they pray that they might be baptised with the Holy Ghost – that while their bodies are washed in the emblematical laver of regeneration, their souls may experience the renewing of the Holy Ghost, and the sprinkling of the blood of Jesus. If the sentiments expressed above be correct, then there may be such a thing as baptismal regeneration; not that the mere external application of water can have any effect to purify the soul; nor that internal grace uniformly or generally accompanies this external washing, but that God, who works when and by what means he pleases, may regenerate by his Spirit the soul of the infant, while in his sacred name, water is applied to the body. And what time in infancy is more likely to be the period of spiritual quickening, than the moment when that sacred rite is performed which is strikingly emblematical of this change? Whether it be proper to say that baptism may be the means of regeneration depends on the sense in which the word means is used.¹³

Reader, I remind you, I am presenting you with what I call dangerous statements by infant baptisers. I deliberately restrain my reaction to these words just quoted – words which tend to Papistry. I content myself to wonder that, however much Alexander tried to guard his assertions, is there any danger that some parents baptising their infant according to this system, might really believe that their child is actually regenerate in and through their baptism? Have any parents actually believed Alexander's words that 'there may be such a thing as baptismal regeneration'? Whether or not they understand the ins-and-outs of baptismal regeneration, and all the theological niceties surrounding the word 'means', I suggest that some parents might, in practical terms, take their child away from 'the emblematical laver of regeneration', as Alexander put it, with their heads and hearts filled with the diabolical and Papist notion of baptismal regeneration. They might well think that their baby is now regenerate, their baby 'is now all right if anything should happen'. I say it is a very real possibility and danger, and one which arises out of Alexander's words. If I am right, or if there is any chance that I might be right, all infant baptisers ought to think about it very seriously. Those who teach this kind of thing carry an enormous weight of responsibility – the full extent of which will not be known until the day of judgement.

As another example of a dangerous statement by an infant baptiser, take the words of A.A.Hodge: 'In the baptism of every infant there are four parties present and concerned in the transaction – God, the church, the parents, and the child. The first three are conscious and active, the fourth is for the time unconscious and passive'.¹⁴ I ask: What – precisely – is God doing in 'the baptism of every infant'? In particular: What is he doing in the baptism of a child who will never be regenerate?

Listen to Calvin again: 'Children are baptised for future repentance and faith. Though these are not yet formed in them, yet the seed of both lies hid in them by the secret operation of the Spirit... Paul... terms it the "washing of regeneration and renewing" (Tit. 3:5)'.¹⁵ Calvin was mistaken. Paul did not call water baptism the washing of regeneration. Do infant baptisers really believe that God's Spirit works in infants, producing the seed of repentance and faith within them by sprinkling? What is the justification for this astounding assertion? And what is 'the seed of repentance and faith'? I do not deny that God can regenerate a sinner when he will, but that is very different to what Calvin said.¹⁶ What is more, a literal understanding of his statement leads to only one end – the indiscriminate baptism of all children. All of them – apparently – will have the secret work of the Spirit within them. I realise Calvin did not actually believe this, but that is why I say that the assertions I have quoted are so very dangerous. They tend to baptismal regeneration. Indeed on the plain reading of the words they tend to nothing else. To put it bluntly, they assert it!

As a further example of statements made by infant baptisers which are perilous, not to say downright wrong, consider the words of David J.Engelsma:

¹⁴ A. A. Hodge p336.

¹⁵ Calvin: Institutes Vol.2 p543.

¹⁶ The question of whether or not infants can be regenerated is a red herring – of course they can – but when such a statement is made in connection with baptism (Calvin: Institutes Vol.2 p541), it is loaded beyond description.

Dangerous Statements by Infant Baptisers

The children of believers are included in the covenant as children, that is, already at conception and birth. They receive forgiveness of sins through the blood of Jesus, the Holy Spirit of sanctification, and church membership – as children. For they have God as their God, and are his people – as children. Therefore, they have full right to baptism... God does not merely put the children of believers in a more advantageous position [than the children of unbelievers], so as to make it likelier that they will be saved; but he establishes his covenant with them, so as to be their God. God gives to the children the promise of the Holy Spirit of Jesus Christ. Accordingly... the Reformed Church regards them, and must regard them, as those ‘sanctified in Christ’... God... gathers his church from age to age from the children of believers... Covenant children are... Jehovah’s children (Ezek. 16:20,21). They are not sinful flesh, spiritually like the devil; but they are holy (1 Cor. 7:14). Quite unlike the children of disobedience, who are ruled by the prince of the power of the air so that they have their conversation in the lusts of their flesh (Eph. 2:1-3), the baptised children of believers are in the Lord Jesus.

Engelsma said that he witnessed boldly to God’s covenant because, among other things, God, ‘looked upon me in my infancy in grace, incorporated me as a baby by his Spirit into his Son, Jesus’.¹⁷ He meant, of course, by infant baptism.

I must be brief in my comments, but these words cannot go unchallenged. First, observe Engelsma’s emphasis; God blesses the children of believers as children, even from ‘conception and birth’, he said. He claimed that they receive the forgiveness of their sins as children. But the Scriptures say that we receive the forgiveness of sins through and by faith (Acts 10:43; 13:38-39; Rom. 4:1-13). We are saved through faith (Eph. 2:8). Sinners have to be converted to receive forgiveness of sins (Acts 26:16-18). Sinners have to confess their sins before they are forgiven (1 John 1:9). Do the children of believers stand outside all this? Do the children of believers receive forgiveness of their sins as children, because they are the children of believers? Most definitely not! Does this need to be said? Apparently it does. A man, a woman, a child, can only receive the benefits of salvation through faith – their own personal, saving faith (Rom. 3:21-31; Gal. 3:14,22; Eph. 2:8; Phil. 3:9). They are not saved by proxy. Infant baptisers agree that no infant can exercise saving faith – how then can he receive the benefits of Christ's redemption? To be saved, a sinner has to believe. No infant can savingly believe.

¹⁷ Engelsma pp9,12-13,17-18,23.

Reader, please do not allow yourself to be side-tracked at this stage on to the vexed and sad question of infants who die. This red herring is often raised by infant baptisers, but the spiritual condition and fate of such infants is another issue altogether, totally unconnected with the main argument. In the tragic case of infant death, let us rest in the assertion: 'Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?' (Gen. 18:25).¹⁸ He is the gracious God who is 'abundant in mercy, forgiving iniquity and transgression' (Num. 14:18). We may safely leave such infants, along with all those who never develop a sufficient sense of reason to be responsible before God, in the merciful hands of the LORD. But, as I said, none of this is relevant to the debate about infant baptism.¹⁹

To return to the main point: The plain biblical fact is, no one is saved because his parents are believers. Every sinner must come to Christ by faith in order to be saved, and until he does so come, he is under the wrath of God (Eph. 2:3). We do not become the children of God by being the children of believers, as Engelsma asserted – no! we become the children of God 'through faith in Christ Jesus' (Gal. 3:26).

Further, what of Engelsma's assertion that the children of believers are not merely more likely to be saved than the children of unbelievers? What did he intend by that statement? After all, according to his own words, these children already have the Holy Spirit, already are the children of God and have already received the forgiveness of sins. What is left? But taking his words at face value – what, precisely, is the advantage Engelsma referred to? In comparison with the children of unbelievers, they are more than more likely to be saved, he said. How much more? Very likely? Almost certainly? In reality, as I have just said, if Engelsma's words mean anything, these children are ¹⁸ And, it must be remembered, Abraham used this argument with God to prevent 'the righteous' minority being caught up in the judgement of 'the wicked' majority. Of course, each of us – every infant born (except Christ) – is a sinner, and God's judgement is just, but, to my mind, Abraham's argument is very powerful. If he felt it would carry weight with God over Lot in Sodom, how much more for us over infants who die before they have reached the age of responsible action! I will return to Gen. 18:25.

¹⁹ As always, it is foolish to legislate on the basis of the exception. Hard cases make bad law.

certain to be saved! They are already saved. If they are incorporated into Jesus in infancy by infant baptism, what remains to be done? If words mean anything at all, it amounts to an assertion that all the children of believers are saved because they are the children of believers and have been sprinkled. Indeed, Engelsma called them Jehovah's children.

What is more, Engelsma declared that the children of believers are not born sinners like others, in that they are not born with the grim consequences of the fall as listed in Ephesians 2:1-3. They are 'quite unlike the children of disobedience', he declared, they do not conduct themselves in the lusts of the flesh, since 'the baptised children of believers are in the Lord Jesus'. Did Engelsma mean to say this? If so, he contradicted himself. In another statement he said that 'our children are by nature dead in sin';²⁰ that is, of course, they are included in Ephesians 2:1-3, they are among the children of disobedience, and they do conduct themselves in the lusts of the flesh.

I am not interested in merely pointing out the inconsistency of Engelsma's assertions; I am deeply concerned, passionately concerned, lest anyone should believe the totally unscriptural view that any child – any child – is born in a condition not covered by the fall. All the sons of Adam are ruined from conception (Ps. 51:5), contrary to Engelsma's assertion that the children of believers are the children of God from that time. His alarming statement runs directly counter to Scripture. All children, including the children of believers, are born 'dead in trespasses and sins... by nature children of wrath' (Eph. 2:1-3). Paul stated that 'we all' were ruined in Adam – all of us, including the children of believers. Jesus is the only man to have avoided this corruption; are the children of believers free of it? Do they escape this ruin by being conceived of believing parents who sprinkle them in infancy? Is this what the gospel amounts to?

Finally, in contradiction of Engelsma's claim, it is a relief to be able to state that God does not 'gather his church... from the children of believers'.²¹ Rather, he gathers his elect from out of the mass of fallen humanity, 'the same lump' (Rom. 9:21). He redeems, calls and saves the ungodly as sinners (Mark 2:17; Rom. 5:6-10; 1 Tim. 1:15). God delights to call sinners as sinners; he does not work among the children of believers as such, nor exclusively among them. Indeed, he glories in spreading his arms wide to embrace those who have no connection whatsoever with the covenant people (Rom. 9:24-26; 10:11-21). This is a vital point. There is no distinction whatsoever in the gospel call, neither on the basis of race nor of family connection. God calls sinners as sinners.²² The Spirit is sent to convince men of sin (John 16:8); this is the warrant for faith, since Christ died for sinners. Am I a sinner? Then I am invited to Christ. If it is true that God gathers his elect out of the line and descent of believers, then the Spirit must convince men that their parents were truly the children of God! But we have no promise to say that he does so convince.²³ Reader, do you not see that Engelsma's words are dangerous, as I claimed earlier? They are unscriptural. Their effect is devastating.

²¹ I am not saying, of course, that God does not call children of believers!

Herman Hanko, in his defence of infant baptism, said that 'believers and their seed are saved. And the seed of believers are saved as children'. He also declared that believers have 'the sure knowledge that God's promise is to save them and their children. They instruct covenant children. And their instruction will be fruitful for it falls upon hearts which are regenerated by the Spirit of Christ'. Did Hanko really believe this? Are all the baptised children of believers regenerated? He said they were! If God has given his promise to all believers, as Hanko claimed, that both they and their children are to be saved, why is it sadly undeniable that some children of some believers are not saved? How sure is this ‘sure knowledge’ which Hanko spoke of? He also said: ‘[When] believers... instruct their children in the ways of the Lord, they have the sure word of God that they are instructing children of God, God’s own elect people’.²⁴ Well, are the children of believers elect and regenerated by God because their parents are believers? What a breathtaking assertion! Is this the Christian religion? Is this the doctrine of the Bible? Even Papists do not go this far. Dangerous? Statements like these are diabolical.

²² 'Does not the potter have power over the clay, from the same lump to make one vessel for honour, and another for dishonour?' (Rom. 9:21). It is 'from the same lump', from fallen humanity, that God chooses and forms elect or reprobate vessels. 'Paul is not now dealing with God's sovereign rights over men as men but over men as sinners' (John Murray Vol.2 p32, emphasis mine). 'The mass of fallen men are in [God's] hands, and it is his right to dispose of them at pleasure' (Charles Hodge: Romans p319, emphasis mine). 'The potter does not create the clay; he starts with it, it is there in front of him on the bench... The apostle is not dealing here at all with God's purpose in the original creation of man, or with what God does with human nature as such. He is dealing with God's relationship to fallen humanity' (Lloyd-Jones: Romans 9 pp199-200, emphasis mine). See also editor's notes in Calvin: Commentaries Vol.19 Part 2 pp366-367. All humanity, elect and reprobate, are at birth, whether born of believers or not, 'by nature children of wrath' (Eph. 2:3), of 'the same lump'.

²³ Compare the hyper-Calvinist's insistence on a sinner being made 'sensible' before he is invited to Christ (see my Offer pp8-10, and my forthcoming book on Septimus Sears).

Finally, as the last in this long catalogue of terrifying assertions by infant baptisers, listen to the horrific Prayer of Thanksgiving of the Reformed Church: ‘Thou hast forgiven us, and our children, all our sins, through the blood of thy beloved Son Jesus Christ, and received us through thy Holy Spirit as members of thine only begotten Son’.²⁵ If these words are true – if, and what an ‘if’ – what is left for the children of believers? They are saved because their parents are believers, is the claim! Those who believe these words ought to have as many children as possible in order to populate the world with Christians! But it is not enough for sinners to belong to believing parents. Listen to the words of Christ: ‘Most assuredly, I say to you, unless one is born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God... That which is born of flesh is flesh’ (John 3:3-8). Yes! And that includes the children of believers – they are born of flesh, are they not? They must be born again. The fact that their parents are believers will never ensure their salvation.

Reader, is my assertion not true? When infant baptisers argue for their practice, they say things which are highly dangerous; and worse.²⁶

²⁶ Reader, if you need further damning evidence, see Wright: What...? pp81-102. Let Lusk sum this up. In furthering his claim that ‘a truly Calvinistic soteriology requires a Calvinistic sacramentology and vice-versa’, his extracts from various writers showed what he meant. Hughes Oliphant Old: ‘The Reformers insisted that according to Scripture there was one baptism. To divide the sacrament into a baptism of water and a baptism of the Spirit... was misleading... Reformed churches should not in their liturgical practice give ground to a separation of the baptism with water and the baptism of the Spirit’. Dangerous Statements by Infant Baptisers

It is high time we examined the so-called biblical basis of infant baptism. What claims do infant baptisers put forward? Naturally, it is impossible to know what every infant baptiser has said. When I assert, therefore, that infant baptisers justify their claims by a certain line of reasoning, I only intend to say that at least some infant baptisers argue in that particular way. With this in mind we shall look at ten classes of argument.

view [is] that God acts to accomplish God's purposes through sacraments'. Cornelius Burges: 'Sacred baptism, the laver of regeneration and of the renewing of the Holy Ghost... I do not deny future actual efficacy of baptism after the act of administration, but I only plead for some efficacy when it is administered'. Lusk added that 'Burges claimed Calvin for support of this view'. Lusk also rightly argued that 'the ordinary necessity of baptism for salvation is simply the teaching of the Westminster standards... The Confession teaches that there is no ordinary possibility of salvation outside the visible church and baptism is the mode of entrance into the visible church' (Lusk: 'Paedobaptism' pp97,118,122,124,125; Westminster pp107-108,114).
