History and Identity

Who are you? Who are we?

To get to know each other, we eventually tell stories—history leads to identity.

Our Context vs. Their Context

When we approach any literature, we bring with it our own set of questions—from our context.

What are the questions we normally ask of the book of Genesis?

Ans. The origins of the universe and of life.

What were the questions brought to the book by the original audience of Jews?

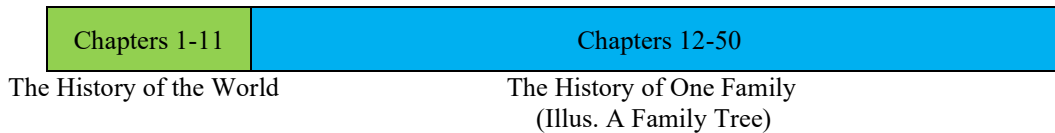

Ans. They were probably quite different than our questions.

Literary Structure of Genesis

To find the original meaning of the book, consider its most basic structure:

Genesis identifies God’s purpose for the Jews as a people through the history of their original family.

Literary Marker of Genesis: תּוֹלְדוֹת (Heb. toledoth)
